

Published based on New Bajaj Pulsar Not Coming To The Expo!

New Bajaj Pulsar Not Coming To The Expo!

This is the second most disappointing news for Pulsar fans this week. Just yesterday news of Bajaj Auto postponing the launch of the all new Pulsars to January came and now the Chakan based automaker has decided not to display any of its motorcycle at the upcoming Auto Expo. Yes, the company instead would showcase commercial vehicles and an improved version of the ultra low cost (ULC) car. The KTM Duke 200, which is set for launch later this month won't be present either and the next generation Pulsars will be launched in January but won't make it to the 2012 Auto Expo.

Now the next generation Bajaj Pulsars are the most awaited set of machines in 2012. To be improved by leaps and bounds, the bikes are going to be game changers. Bajaj Auto might have decided to exclude the all new Pulsar from the Expo as the company might be planning to hold an entirely separate event for the launch of these bikes. Launching at an event such as the Auto Expo would dilute the attention and Bajaj Auto certainly has no plans to do so. What are your expectations from the next gen Pulsar series?

You can also find this article published on New Bajaj Pulsar Not Coming To The Expo!, and on the tag pages Bajaj.