2010 Fiat Grande Punto Facelift

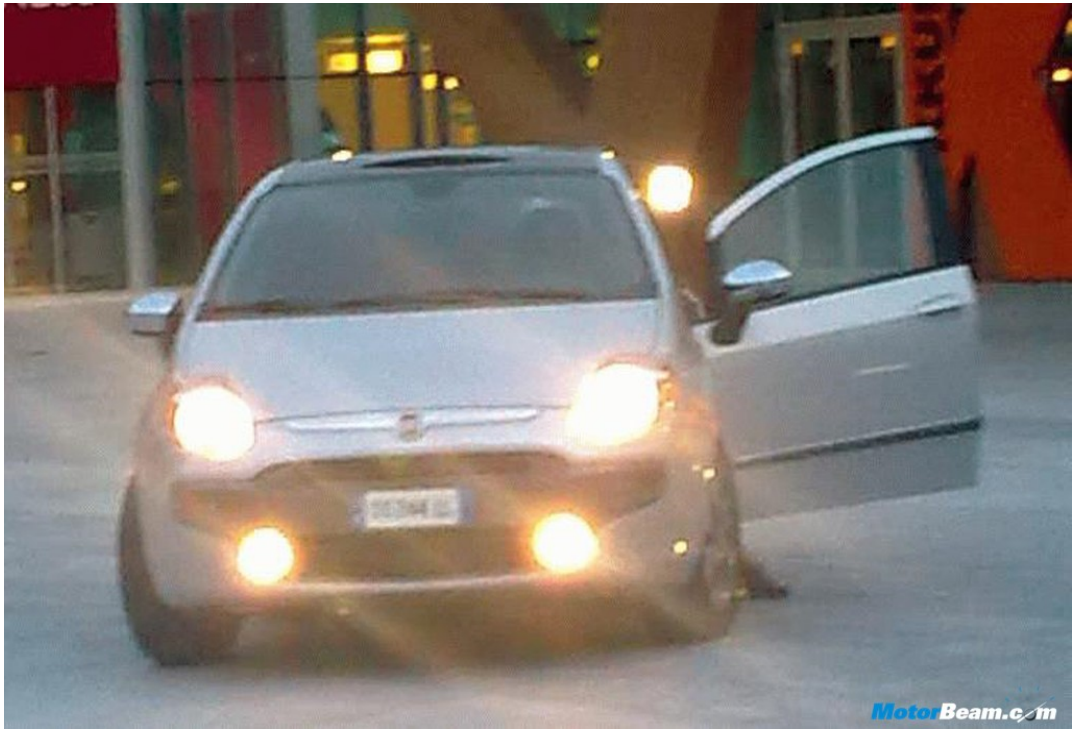

Fiat has been testing the 2010 Grande Punto for some time now. However these are the first clear pictures of the mid-life facelift of Fiat's best selling car of recent times. The front has been very heavily revised along with a new dashboard and minute cosmetic updates to the rear. The 2010 Fiat Grande Punto Facelift will officially break cover at the Frankfurt Motor Show in September. However India won't get these changes as a all new model is set to arrive in 2012.

The front end has a larger front radiator grille and a black colour plastic bumper section. The indicators slot below the headlights and the round foglights are now re-positioned. The grille is now three piece. The rear lights now incorporate large white internal lens covers. The dashboard has also been revamped slightly to keep things fresh in the interiors. The most significant changes will come under the hood with Euro V engine and power upgrades and adoption of Stop-Start technology.
