

Published based on New Honda City

New Honda City

Honda is planning to launch the new City in September. The new City looks like a toned down version of the current Civic and will be positioned above the current City. The current City will still sell alongside.

The new City will have a newly designed and shaped G-CON structure sporting a toned new line up of powertrains. As far as the new features are concerned, Honda is likely to introduce paddle shift gear option, dual airbags, integrated music system with steering mounted controls, anti-lock braking system (ABS), temperature control and electronically adjustable front seats. The new City will use Honda's superb i-Vtec engines. The SX4 has made a dent in the current City's sales to a certain extent, and Honda's plan is to revive the sales by launching this new version. But Maruti won't sit still, they have their weapon ready to be unleashed, it's their fantastic multijet engine which will do duty in the SX4. Honda also plans to launch a smaller capacity engined new City later on. Let the battle commence.

[gallery]

Pics source Neo (Team-Bhp)

You can also find this article published on New Honda City, and on the tag pages New Honda City.