New Honda Civic Hatchback Has CBR250R Influence

Honda has just announced the new Civic which has been specifically developed for the European market. When the next generation Civic was unveiled earlier, we all were very disappointed and thought the design was a step backward. However the European version has been designed in the right direction and looks the part. This 5-door hatchback will never make it to India and we will get the US version of the 9th generation Civic. However, that doesn't stop us from drooling over this extremely hot hatchback. Now the European Honda Civic does take heavy influence from a Honda motorcycle, which is sold in India. Yes the new Civic does look a lot like the Honda CBR250R at the front. We have no clue why Honda has done so but it seems to work very well for them.
