

Published based on Lamborghini 4 Door Urus Concept

Lamborghini 4 Door Urus Concept

The Mystery Lamborghini to be unveiled at the Paris Motor Show is none other than a 4 door, which will compete against the forthcoming Aston Martin Rapide and Porsche Panamera. The car is a front engine, coupe styled, four door model and Lamborghini may call it the Urus.

Urus was a type of large, horned cattle in Europe that went extinct in 1627. The source from Automotive News has also stated that the concept is almost ready for production and is likely to feature an Audi sourced powerplant which will be smaller than the current 5.0 litre V10 in the Gallardo, but with equal power thanks to a twin turbocharged unit slotting neatly behind the front axle for ideal weight distribution. Lamborghini plans to build around 3,000 units a year of the new car, the same number that Aston Martin plans to build of its Rapide.

You can also find this article published on Lamborghini 4 Door Urus Concept, and on the tag pages Lamborghini 4 Door Urus Concept.