Maruti May Cut Production

Maruti Suzuki, may consider production cut if the market does not improve. Maruti has been negotiating contract manufacturing deal for its A-Star model with Nissan, also expects to start exports for the Japanese car maker by around February-March next year.

Maruti Suzuki India Managing Director Shinzo Nakanishi said that across the world there has been a slowdown in demand, including China, India and other BRIC countries. In the April-November period, the company's sales growth witnessed a negative growth of three per cent compared with the corresponding period last year.
