The new Tata Indigo will be launched on the 14th of this month and what better way to create excitement than to have a competition. However the competition is a joke in itself with the prize being a day with the Manza driven by a chauffeur. The teaser site is up (you can check it out here) and we can see from the picture of the interior that the new Indigo will have the instrument cluster right in front of the driver (unlike the Indica Vista), a multi-information display on the center console and buttons on the steering wheel to operate the audio and MID systems.
