

Published based on Future Car Launches

Future Car Launches

Meanwhile, the new Corolla (Altis) from Toyota is coming on September 5 and Honda will bring its new City in the middle of next month. Maruti's A-Star hatchback will be introduced in October. Ditto for Fiat's Linea sedan along with GM's new entry into the sedan segment. The new 7 Series from BMW and Hyundai i20 hatchback will be coming in November.

Mitsubishi is planning to launch its new sedan, the Lancer Gallant, and compact SUV Outlander in October and utility major M&M will debut its new platform Ingenio MUV. The new launches are expected to boost the sagging fortunes of carmakers, who are desperately looking for incremental sales. For the first time three years, passenger car sales declined 1.7% to 87,724 cars this July, down from 89,250 cars in the same month last year.

Meanwhile, the new Corolla (Altis) from Toyota is coming on September 5 and Honda will bring its new City in the middle of next month. Maruti's A-Star hatchback will be introduced in October. Ditto for Fiat's Linea sedan along with GM's new entry into the sedan segment. The new 7 Series from BMW and Hyundai i20 hatchback will be coming in November.

Mitsubishi is planning to launch its new sedan, the Lancer Gallant, and compact SUV Outlander in October and utility major M&M will debut its new platform Ingenio MUV.

Maruti's A-Star and Hyundai i20 are primarily targeting the export market. Tata Motors also plans to hit overseas markets with the Indica Vista and launch a completely new versions of the Tata Indigo and Tata Safari.

You can also find this article published on Future Car Launches, and on the tag pages Cars.